Dear Channapha,

This holiday season, we're celebrating our heroes in the field: the strong, courageous deminers, the men and women who help survivors recover from injuries, and the teams who teach young children about the deadly dangers of bombs. Their daily bravery and dedication to actively make change happen in Laos is truly inspiring. They are building the future of tomorrow.

600 lethal bombs are being removed from Lao villages EVERY SINGLE DAY. This incredible progress is a result of the significant role we play in advocating for greater U.S. funding for the unexploded ordnance (UXO) sector in Laos. Our Executive Director, Channapha Khamvongsa, just returned from her latest trip to Laos where she met with demining groups and followed-up with affected survivors. With more than 15,000 survivors and about 40 incidents per year, the task is far from over.

Your loyal support to save lives in Laos allows us to provide our education and advocacy services for free. Remember, none of the funding we fight for in Congress will go to Legacies of War. We receive no government funding from any country for the services we offer to the community. We are working hard to ensure that the heroes on the ground can continue their life-saving work. But our efforts to educate the public and give the UXO sector in Laos a voice depend on private donations from loyal supporters like YOU.

*Help us bring hope to the more than 15,000 survivors.
Join us in celebrating our daily heroes on the ground who take matters into their own hands to change lives in Laos.*

Because of the current political climate and potential cuts in foreign aid, your help is more important than ever. Your year-end gift to Legacies of War will go straight to work.

Your support will save lives and give survivors a chance for a better future. Take action now! Thank you!
